Definition: The timeframe for response is when a CPS agency will have initial face-to-face contact with the alleged victim and/or parent(s) to assess threats to a child’s safety. There are three different response times, which are assigned to cases based on the presence or absence of present danger threats and possible/likely impending danger threats. Agencies have the discretion to mitigate response times based on case circumstances as outlined in Standards.

Present danger threats require an immediate to within the same day response time.

Possible/Likely impending danger threats require a within 24 or 48 hours of receipt of the report, including holidays and weekends response time.

When there are no present or likely impending danger threats, a within five business days of receipt of report response time is required.

Summary of Results: Statewide, the range of identifying the Response Time consistent with Standards was a low of 71.9% in 2018 and a high of 84.2% in 2017. Overall, information supports consistency in performance over this six-year time period.
